

Upgrading your Electric Service – What You Should Know

All costs associated with the initial service to provide electric power were paid by the developer when the property was developed and was then passed along to the homebuyer as part of the purchase price of the property.

All costs associated with the need to upgrade service to accommodate the installation of refrigerated air systems, solar panels, water wells, etc are borne is by the electric consumer who needs the upgrade and NOT by the other individuals already being served by the system.

This follows the rate making principal of the person causing the need, pays for the need.
